On Sunday at 3 p. m., at the Baptist church, a most interesting meeting was held in the interest of boys from 12 to 18. Mr. Harris, of Louisville, delivered the address, "The Greatest Machine in the World." At the same hour a service was given to all interested in boys' work at the Court House. This was in the nature of a conference, and interesting talks along the line of boys' work were given by Mr. Page and Mr. P. C. Dix. Sunday night the concluding service was held at the Presbyterian church, and stereopticon views were given of Camp Daniel Boone and the Boy Scout work. Speeches were made by Mr. Harris and Mr. Dix and followed by several of Richmond's young orators, Messrs. Vinson Johnson, Curtis and Frank Corzelli, Curtis Bennett and Stanton Hume.

The centenary of David Livingstone's birth will be observed with appropriate ceremonies at one of the churches Sunday, March 16th. David Livingstone was one of the greatest men who ever lived. He was a scholar, physician, missionary, traveler, explorer, geographer, botanist, all in one. He introduced the Dark Continent to the world. He placed Africa in a position of impregnable prominence from which it can never be dislodged. Every boy should read the life of such a man. There is more romance in such a volume than any work of fiction; more heroism than in the life of half a dozen average heroes. Not to know Livingstone is to miss one of the greatest pleasures in life. Every man who knows anything of him rejoices to know that such men have lived, that they can be produced. He was the honored guest of the nobility of England, but he never forgot that his mission was permanently among the lowly. He lies in Westminster Abbey among the illustrious dead of the British Empire.
